CONGRESS MOVES TO PREVENT RAIL STRIKES

TENNESSEE VALLEY LUMBER MARKET IS SUPPLIED LOCALLY BY SEVERAL FIRMS

Two Mills Take Rough Lumber and Prepare It For Trade

PROCESS EXPLAINED BY MAYOR E. C. PAYNE

New Mechanical Inventions Replace Tedious Work Of Human Hands

(By J. E. Blair.)

The Twin Cities lumber trade, and that of surrounding sections is served by a number of prosperous concerns. As far as known they are: The E. C. Payne Lumber company, the J. D. Bush Lumber company, the Abshire Lumber company, the Rountree Lumber company, the Southern Hardwood company and John A. Thomason and company. The first named are the only ones taking the lumber partly in the rough and finishing it here; the others do a wholesale and retail business. The Abshire company is located on Bank streets, Decatur and is operated by H. C. Abshire of Albany. Mr. Abshire's machinery is electrical driven. He finishes lumber for all kinds of house building enterprises. John A. Thomason located on Railroad street, Decatur about 14 years ago, beginning with one lot, but now his business has spread until it occupies two blocks. The Rountree Lumber company is located near the Louisville and Nashville railroad at Moulton street, West Albany and Charles Rountree is its president and manager. The Southern Hardwood Co. is owned and managed by E. W. F. Himes. His warehouses are located on Oak street, Decatur, near the Tennessee river and close to the switch tracks of the two railroads entering the Twin Cities. Mr. Himes handles all oak lumber suitable for hardwood floors and for furniture. He also handles gum and walnut lumber.

The Payne Lumber Company

A busy place Saturday was the lumber mill of the E. C. Payne Lumber company, located at 308 Fourth Avenue Central Albany, and occupying a city block. An explanation of the workings of his mill as made by Mr. Payne, who is a successful lumber man of long experience, from the cutting of the logs in the woods, to finishing them for houses and house furnishings of all kinds, the following facts appeared—that the unfinished undressed lumber is bought and stacked, some of it in warehouses and some in the open; it is then sawed in such widths as orders require—it is then planed. After that "a sanding" belt is driven over the planed lumber. The belt has sand paper attached to it as its name implies. After the sand belt does its work, the slight rolling appearance left by the planer, disappears, and the lumber is ready to take a high polish when paint or oil is applied. In many cases lumber needs to be carefully jointed and for this purpose a "jointing machine" is used. Where lumber is to be made into doors and into window sashes (and this work is done in an adjoining room) certain rectangular holes must be cut called "mortises." A new appearing machine does this job. It is an auger around which is closely fitted a rectangular sharp cutting tool, and as the auger bores its hole this rectangular tool cuts its way. The old way to make a mortise was to bore a round hole with an auger and then "square the circle" with a hand chisel.

As most every one knows stairway carpenter work is very particular, especially when it had to be done by hand—such work has been simplified and greatly hurried up by the new inventions of machinery used at the Payne Lumber company.

The J. D. Bush Lumber Factory.

On the present site of the Bush Lumber company, there was a lumber mill in the year 1885, with J. D. Jervis as president and owner. Following the death of Mr. Jervis twelve years ago, Jones and Abshire ran the

Foreful Sermon Preached Sunday By Rev. Davenport At 1st Methodist

Following a musical program, an inspiring feature of which was a vocal solo by Mrs. J. M. Petty, the First Methodist church congregation heard their pastor, Rev. G. M. Davenport preach a forceful sermon Sunday morning from the text: "This is pure religion and undefiled that you visit the widows and orphans in their affliction; and that you keep yourself unspotted from the world." The preacher spoke last Sunday on the first clause of the text and accordingly on yesterday he used the last clause—"and keep yourself unspotted from the world." "Character is the greatest thing in the world," declared the speaker. "Nothing can give you the same advantage as character; and nothing can bring it back once it is gone." In this connection the preacher told the story of a little mountain girl who went to a party, and who was content with her crude mode of dress, until she saw, more finely dressed girls at the party. "You might be satisfied with the filthy rags of dishonor, until you saw the purity of the robes of righteousness; but then you would be ashamed of yourself, just as the little mountain girl was when she joined the party of well dressed people. Character is something that will prevent you from being ashamed anywhere. It is God's yard stick. Those that overcome are the only people that are promised an abundant entrance into the heaven above." In speaking of the final acid test of character, Rev. Davenport said: "Once a person was asked what test he gave to silver to see whether or not it was refined, and received the reply that when silver would reflect the image of the refiner it was refined. Only when your character reflects the

Conducts Service At Mt. Nebo Church

Rev. W. P. Wilks, pastor of the Central Baptist church of this city is holding a meeting at Mt. Nebo Baptist church, in the south-western part of the county the meeting to extend through the week. Mt. Nebo is one of the oldest Baptist churches in the county, numbering among its membership some of the most substantial citizens of the county. The hospitality abounding among the citizens of that section has long been the subject of much favorable comment. The protracted meeting services are, always occasions for the assembling of the citizenship of that section, who take this annual occasion for the renewing of old acquaintances, and the enjoying of the preaching services, which are always attended by large crowds, many of them former citizens of that section, though now living at different points over the county. Several citizens of the Twin Cities attended services there Sunday.

Corbin Officers Are Arrested By Federal Agents

(By International News Service.)
CORBIN, Ky., Aug. 21.—Jim Manning, chief of police, Will Patterson, city patrol, and two deputy sheriffs, W. H. Barker and J. B. Sutton, were under arrest here today, charged with interfering with federal officers on duty in connection with the strike situation. Manning held up and searched an automobile, in which deputy United States marshals were riding. Manning had procured search warrants from both federal and local authorities, charging the automobile was used to transport liquor. No liquor was found. It is the first outward appearance of friction between the deputy marshals and officials of Corbin, a typical railroad town. The officers will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow at Covington, Ky.

REPORTS MADE BY ROPER AND WILSON TODAY OPTIMISTIC

The following official statement was issued today by H. C. Hutchinson, chairman of the press committee of the Federated craft:

Monday morning meetings of the rail strikers have been the most largely attended of any in the past and the same was the case this morning. The meeting was at the Princess theater, where it has been held for one week up to this morning. The chairman announced that the usual reports would be made after which S. E. Roper and W. H. Wilson would make addresses. This statement was greeted with applause.

The Laxson Quartette led the open hymn, followed by guitar and violin music as played by Will Thompson and A. P. Bell. The opening prayer was offered by J. M. Watson, and the closing prayer was by W. R. McCluskey. T. Frank Lewis, chairman of the Relief committee announced a number of personal donations and said that Nolon Lodge No. 562, of Odd Fellows, the First Christian church of Albany, and the Retail Clerks of the Twin Cities had made donations to the strike fund. Also collection similar to the one taken last week was given by the meeting at large.

The publicity committee made its usual report, which contained the newspaper reports of the day, relating to the strike.

S. E. Roper's address was very optimistic. W. H. Wilson who had been on a visitation mission to Knoxville and Corbin, Ky., also made an optimistic address (saying all the men were standing "a 100 percent and like a stone wall"). The usual addresses were made by local strikers.

Motion to adjourn prevailed at 10:20, time of meeting one hour and twenty minutes.

MARSHALL DEPUTIES SEEKING 2 MEN WHO ATTEMPTED HOLDUP

(By International News Service.)
GUNTERSVILLE, Ala., Aug. 21.—County officers today are trying to find two men who, late Saturday night, attempted to hold up John Kearney, truck driver for the Standard Oil company, on Brindlee mountain, 15 miles from here.

As the bandits called to him to stop Kearney through his heavy truck into topmost speed, smashing through obstructions placed in the road and almost running down one of the bandits. Kearney, who had been collecting from oil deliveries, had about $85 in his pocket.

ANTHRACITE MINERS MAY ASK OPERATORS FOR A MODIFICATION OF WAGE PROPOSALS

District Presidents Will Report
Sentiment of Men To Executive

SEVERAL BITUMINOUS
OPERATORS SIGNUP

Operations Resumed In Michigan
After Being Shut Down
Five Months

(By International News Service.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 21.—From the men back home will come the answer to the offer of the anthracite operators for a settlement of the 20 weeks strike. The three district presidents will carry the message to President Garcia and all advance hints are the mine workers will seek modification of the proposal, which would make the anthracite conciliation board, a board of three umpires, a court of last resort on wages.

The wage question still is the big issue of the dispute. Both sides are willing that the men return to work on the 1920 scale until April 1, next year, but working out the method by which the scale will be fixed from that period on is the one difficult point which creates discord.

Under the offer of the miners, as laid down in the letter of President Warriner, to John L. Lewis, the old wage scale is to be re-established for the balance of the coal year but only on condition that there first be devised a method for reaching a scale for the new year.

The conciliation board matter, as presented by the operators, was the starting point of peace. How the rank and file back home would view the matter was unknown and adjournment came on Saturday in order that the district chiefs might get home and feel the matter out.

There can be no hiding of the fact that the miners are unchanged in their opposition to arbitration in any form. At least one of the anthracite districts is already outspoken in opposition to the conciliation board proposals of the operators. It is reasonable certain that other districts will oppose it, but none on such pronounced lines.

Both companies hold memberships in the Pittsburgh Producers Association and that association had previously ignored the agreement.

CAREFUL PROBE OF EXPRESS WRECK IS IN PROGRESS TODAY

(By International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Careful investigation was in progress today in an effort to determine whether the wreck of the "Million Dollar Express" of the Michigan Central railroad yesterday near Gary, Ind., was the result of a plot or if a defective locomotive was responsible for the crash.

Two were killed and two seriously injured. An official of the road today stated 37 spikes had been pulled from the inside of one of the rails, thus allowing the track to spread and throw the train into a ditch. A reward of $1,000 was offered for the arrest and conviction of the wreckers.

The train was speeding at 60 miles an hour when the engine left the track. Cars piled up a huge pyramid of wreckage. The engineer and firemen were killed.

'INDUSTRIAL SKIES' CONTINUE TO CLEAR AND OFFICIALS ARE IN A HOPEFUL MOOD

Production of Coal Will Begin In Mines Idle Four Months

B. M. JEWELL RETURNS TO WASHINGTON TODAY

Congress Appears In No Hurry
To Pass Special Legislation
Now

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—A move to end the recurrence of railroad strikes by amending the transportation act was made in the house this afternoon by Representative Dickson, Republican, of Iowa.

Dickson introduced an amendment, which would prevent wage decisions of the railroad labor board from becoming effective until five months after being handed down. The amendment, if adopted, he said, would eliminate the chief causes of rail walkouts.

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Clearing industrial skies ushered in the new week today.

Production of coal will begin this week in mines that have been idle for four months and with the improved outlook for peace in the railroad strike, officials were confident that the end of this week will see industrial peace once more established.

Those who talked with the President over the week end said that he was hopeful over the outlook and was well pleased with the way his message was received despite the severe criticism by Samuel Gompers.

The government plans no further step in the railroad situation until Wednesday's conference in New York reveals whether a basis for peace has been reached. Private advices received in Washington relayed to the White House indicate that such a basis has been found.

B. M. Jewell returned to the capital today to await the New York conference. He would not comment upon the negotiations.

Jewell did not expect to see President Harding again prior to the New York meeting on Wednesday.

Meanwhile Congress gave indications today of dallying with the President's legislation on the coal industry.

With the tariff in congress and the controversial owner's question coming next, congress appeared in no hurry to put the President's plan into action.

The enactment of the Kellogg bill giving the Federal courts power to interfere where aliens are concerned in riots, also is to be delayed. Pacific coast congressmen are almost universally against it on account of the Japanese question. Following a conference with the President at the White House today, Representative Winslow, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, announced that the administration bill providing for an investigation of the coal industry would be introduced in the house this afternoon.

The bill will provide for a commission of nine members to report to the House on January 1, 1923.

SPENCER QUIET

(By Associated Press.)

SPENCER, N. C., August 21.—Quiet prevailed here today after Sunday was marked by the blasting of the water main supplying the Southern railway shops. Several box cars were burned in the yards. There was an early morning outbreak of apparently harmless firing.

Considerable delay in the movement of trains was caused by the lack of water.

SPEAKING ABOUT TEACHERS AND THEIR INFLUENCE

As the death of Editor Northcliffe brought his labors in journalism and his service to his country into sharp relief, so deaths of leaders in any of the great business and professions would have a similar effect.

Suppose for a moment, that some great school teacher, should strike his colors to death, there would go up hundreds of tributes to his or her work and to the inestimable influence of the teaching profession.

In the hurly-burly of our modern life, when the out standing occupations seem to be trying to get a head of some one or some group in the race for fortune, those workers in human character are totally forgotten or quietly laid on the shelf, for a more convenient season. Not often are the teachers of a city or a county of a state or of a nation counted among the so-called "great" of our age. And yet they are the builders—barring the parents in the home—of the characters of those we "delight to honor." So to speak, is the effect greater than his cause?

Are certain outstanding characters greater than the people who formed their characters and made their environment? Life in the school room is not for those who love the applause of men, or self assertive people, who like best of all to play the role oracle. And the teaching profession has few within its ranks who are greedy for the gain of this world's goods. Those who wish to build fame and fortune for themselves, as it is generally recognized in this world, should stay out of the teaching profession, indeed, serves the public, but it furnishes little opportunity for self glory.

Those whose idea is to "get all they can out of life," if they were to write the history of the life of teachers would consider they had the material for a tragedy. Such people would think the efforts of a mere teacher were as futile as those of the fabled weaver named, Penelope, whose work was unraveled as fast as she wove it.

But such do not believe the truth—"Train a child up in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Even the minds of the people on whose hearts the teachers write immortal truths seldom turn in praise of their preceptor; only when their great benefactors are cold in death does the song of praise arise.

Every eye-pupil of a departed teacher rises up and calls him blessed, after his ears have lost their sense of hearing. Too often it is only in the after glow of souls are set, do we see them in their true light, and appreciate them for their true worth. But such has ever been the case. And others as well as regular teachers fully realize that they are to remain without honor until it is too late to know how their life work has been regarded.

But the true teachers do not worry over expressions of appreciation. They know that their reward is sure. They realize in a way that their tedious duties are not performed in vain. Long after the grass has grown upon their graves, the conscientious pupils of faithful teachers will find a use for the truths they have heard, and they may have the solid masonry of character to stand firm in great national crisis, and they may have such lofty ideals as that their prayers may avail when all else is unavailing.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE GREW AND DEVELOPED; AND WAS GREAT AT THE END

Services over the mortal remains of Lord Northcliffe England's premier publisher were held Friday in historic Westminster Abbey. No greater distinction that can come to an Englishman, than to be so honored in that exclusive place.

It is reported that there was never a greater display of floral tributes than appeared at the Northcliffe home before the exercises in Westminster. The mansion is described as bearing resemblance to a huge flower garden. There were florals from all parts of the world.

The Northcliffe publications from every corner of the empire sent silent tributes bearing the simple words: "To our chief." One floral was a large chair completely covered with flowers, but empty in all other respects. One of the most conspicuous, offerings was a magnificent broken column made of white roses and sent by many directors of associated newspapers.

There were many tributes to the dead editor from newspapers and business organizations in America. The interment was at St. Marybone, a northwestern suburb of London. The leading men of the British empire were in attendance, and many of the foreign nations were represented by their accredited diplomats.

One of the significant sentiments expressed was of American origin, originally written by Longfellow in his familiar "Psalm of Life." Most of the stanzas of that simple but elegant poem are as follows—"Tell me not in mournful numbers life is but an empty dream—that the soul is dead that slumbers, and things are not what they seem. Life is real life is earnest and the grave is not its goal—"dust, thou art, to dust returnest" was not spoken of the soul. Not enjoyment and not sorrow is destined end or way but to act that each tomorrow find us further than today. Lives of great men all remind us, we can make our lives sublime and departing leave behind us foot prints on the sands of time. Footprints that perhaps another sailing o'er life's solemn main, a forlorn and shipwrecked brother seeing shall take heart again. Let us then be up and doing with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait."

If there ever was a man that labored and waited long for a results it was Editor Northcliffe. He came into journalism, when he thought he had to pander to people's love of the unreal and the flashy—and he gave them what they wanted, but Northcliffe could grow. And because he could grow, explains why he died such a great man. Because his was willing to keep growing and to keep serving until the end, is why his is one of the lives that remind us "we can make our lives sublime and departing leave behind us foot prints on the sands of time—foot prints that perhaps another sailing o'er life's solemn main, some forlorn and ship wrecked brother seeing shall take heart again."

WITH SLIPPING AWAY FRENCH SUPPORT, WILL FRANCE FIGHT

The bottom of the difficulty between France and England, as to German reparation, is that England can afford to do without war damages, and is anxious for German business, while France must have her war claims paid, and France would not be hurt as much as Britain if business stagnation continues in Europe. So it follows that while Lloyd George is getting credit for being lenient with the Central Powers, he and his constituents deserve no credit for it as it is to their financial advantage to maintain that attitude.

America should not hastily conclude that while England consented to a moratorium, as regards German debts and France would not consent, that our English friends are to be commended and our old French allies condemned.

Neither should we conclude that France is seeking military rule, and that England is for peace. The break between England and France is over the latter's inability to wait indefinitely for the just and honest debts due her.

We complain of high taxation, but compared to the way the French are now taxed we know nothing about exorbitant taxation.

Just as our losses in the world war are small, as compared to those of England so English losses are trifling as compared to those undergone by the French people. We complain of high living costs but we know nothing of them compared to what the French suffer in this respect. With the French nation crushed it is idiotic to think and talk of the French attempting military domination. Outside of holding her liberty as a nation France gained nothing in the great war. They were victorious but victory cost them too dearly for them to be enamored with war. There is a report from Europe that the French are holding secret councils, possibly war councils. But whatever France does, it is sure she does not want to fight. She is too near blue white already. Still on the other hand France is in a desperate predicament, and the most peaceful people if driven to desperation will fight. The French see their industrial regions ruined and no indemnity money in to restore them, while the German industrial regions are still intact. The Germans say they are bankrupt, but her factories are running, which is more than can be said for France.

The German currency has been debased and purposely it is claimed in some quarters, so as to make her plight seem worse than it really is. The French feel like the German is like a man who owes debts he does not want to pay. When Germany repudiates her national obligations, if she does, after it is all over she will still have her mines and factories, and France will have nothing for all her state of affairs would drive Americans to desperation, will it not accomplish the same result for pains in defeating the German drive on Paris. This the French. French soldiers probably will not invade Germany, there will be found some other way, but in case such a calamity does come, the French will not without justification.

FORD AND FERTILIZER

Senator Harrel of Oklahoma and other members of Congress have been criticizing the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals on the ground that it did not contain a guarantee to the effect that commercial fertilizers would be manufactured in case the project was turned over to the Detroit man for operation. That such criticisms are entirely unfounded is emphasized in no uncertain terms by the following extract from a letter written on the subject by Gray Silver, representing the American Farm Bureau at Washington. Referring to Section 15 of the Ford bid, Mr. Silver says:

The manufacturer, sale and distribution of commercial fertilizers constitutes one of the principal considerations of the offer. Not only does Mr. Ford guarantee to manufacture fertilizer, but he states that he will make 40,000 tons of nitrogen, equal to one-fifth of our total annual consumption in fertilizer, and he will do so "with the most economical power available." The methods of producing phosphate fertilizers are well known and the source of material is within forty miles of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee phosphate fields, and there are great possibilities in the production of potash from potash shales by the use of the electric furnace and from other substances.

Every word and more of Mr. Silver's letter is true, but it will all too probably fail of consideration at the hands of these to whom it is addressed. There is no reason for refusing Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals except the unwillingness of a majority of the present Congress to abandon petty politics in favor of such a course of action as would largely benefit the great masses of the people in this and every other section of the United States. Political wisdom would dictate that the Republican party either accept Ford's offer or put forward some equally acceptable plan for making use of the great power plants for the welfare of the nation; for it is already as deeply involved in errors of omission and commission as any body which has displayed its weaknesses before the people for many a long year.—Nashville Banner.

Cobb Is Zebra's Stripes Says Rickey, Brains In Feet Or Isn't Human

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, August 21.—When speaking of great ball players, as he frequently does, Branch Rickey, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, starts and finishes with one man only. That man is not Rogers Hornsby, although the good Mr. Rickey might be pardoned for being a bit partial toward the Texan in view of the fact that Hornsby is a member of his ball club.

Neither is he George Sisler, whom Rickey really developed while coaching the University of Michigan ball team. If hounded and harried about the matter Mr. Rickey may be persuaded to admit that he did a good job with George and that certainly Hornsby is something of an asset to the Cardinals.

Cobb the Greatest.

But when it comes down to the greatest of them all, Rickey knows only one ball player, and his name is Cobb.

One of Branch Rickey's favorite stories, if that noted raconteur can be said to favor any particular anecdote, deals with the game Cobb won from the Browns by a base on balls. At that stage of his checkered career Rickey happened to be manager of the Browns.

Hence the occasion remains fixed in the mind much in the same manner that a cornerstone remains fixed in a building. It has been his singular contention ever since that Cobb has brains in his feet.

"The score was tied, with two out in the ninth," says Rickey, in his best platform manner, "when Cobb came up and worked Carl Weiland for a pass. He immediately took a long lead off first and drew a throw. Leary, our first baseman, lobbed the ball back to the box, and immediately Cobb dashed away from the bag again, drawing another throw.

"Again Leary lobbed the ball back, and again Cobb streaked off first. Weiland snatched the ball out of the air and whipped it back. Too late.

Worked It Overtime

"At this stage of the proceedings I thought I saw a chance to retire the side by catching Cobb napping. I stood up in the dugout and yelled:

"Do it again!"

"Leary drew back his arm and tossed the ball even higher than before, and away Cobb went, this time for second base, with no intermediate stops. Weiland reached high in the air, grabbed the ball and threw it in the dirt at Lavan's feet. It went into short center, and Cobb rushed for third.

"The centerfielder had backed up the play, and Cobb figured to be out a mile. The ball beat him by yards, but Austin fumbled momentarily, and right then and there Cobb showed that he either has brains in his feet or he isn't human.

"The ball was lying out there between Austin and the runner for only a fraction of a second, but in that instant Cobb did more thinking than the average ball player does in a season. Instead of sliding for the base he slid for the ball, feet first, gave it a kick that went on to the plate with the winning run.

"It was a clear case of interference, but the umpires couldn't see it that way. And, besides, the game was over. You never can win an argument after the umpires call it a day."

Everybody Collects On Pugilistic Game In Cuba, But the Fighters

(By Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 21.—Identification cards, embellished with all the war-time passport trimmings, for promoters down to lowly towel swingers, constitute one of the features of the new regulations under which the National Boxing Commission will govern the manly art of fisticuffs in Cuba. There is little left to the imagination in the 26 sections of these regulations, just approved by the secretary of government, even the fee to be paid to the timekeeper and announcer being fixed: $15 for each performance. The government, however, has not meddled with the procedure of the mitt slingers in the ring, that being left to the Marquis of Queensbury, as translated by a competent authority.

Interesting features of the regulations include bonds which must be deposited with the boxing commission, from which fines imposed by said commission will be deducted. Promoters must put up $5,000, referees $500, managers $300, timekeepers and announcers $100. Fighters and seconds are exempt.

To secure an identification card, however, which means recognition by the boxing commission, the scale of fees runs from $300 for Havana promoters and $100 for those outside the capital, to $5 for seconds. Managers must pay $10 for each boxer in their stable, and the fighters themselves $10 for cards. These cards are so arranged as to permit the filing of a great deal of personal information concerning the bearer, even down to his finger prints.

Still other provisions of the regulations prohibit betting in the place where fights are staged; appearance in the ring of pugilists less than 18 years old, staging of return fights within a period less than 60 days, and more than one fight per week for any industrious leather pusher.

Promulgation of these regulations was made necessary by the extraordinary spread of boxing in Cuba during the last year. Creation of the National Boxing Commission, headed by Senator Rosendo Collazo, was the first step taken to regulate the sport. The commission, however, found itself handicapped in its attempt to protect the public from unscrupulous promoters and managers and appealed for more authority, which was given it by the secretary of government. The commission now is arranging to ally itself with similar bodies in the United States.

and striking shomen to consider proposals to be discussed at the meeting on Wednesday.

The executives were asked to meet at the office of L. L. Looree. Many of the representatives of the railway brotherhoods were out of town. Warren S. Stone and the heads of most of the other brotherhoods have gone to their homes while Bert M. Jewell was in Washington.

The chief obstacle is the question of seniority and it is understood that this is to be the main subject of debate in the informal conference between now and Wednesday. Opposition is expected from Eastern roads. It is believed that the "moderate" who are trying to settle the strike on a compromise basis are expected to try to bring the others across.

Mr. Looree and W. W. Atterbury are the foremost leaders who are opposed to giving in to the men on the seniority question.

 business until it was purchased from them by J. D. Bush in 1917.

A number of lumber sheds were erected in 1919, and in the same year the old steam plant was abolished and electric motors installed. A new motoriser machine was among other improvements.

During the war this company did some war contract work, but mostly served the local trade. Some orders go to such outlying cities as Cullman, Sheffield and Gallatin, Tenn.

Outside of floorings, sidings and ceilings, this company finishes all its materials in the plant.

The large wood planer gets most of the lumber first, which planes it all ready for mouldings, casings, and other interior finish. One of the unusual machines of this concern is a "resaw," which finishes siding ready to be nailed on the buildings. All the other machinery is the same as found in similar plants.

The Bush Lumber company is located on Ferry and Market streets, Decatur, occupies a block with L. & N. and Southern Switch on either side. The mill is located close up to the Tennessee river, near two good boat landings.

Steiner 'Satisfied'
 By Gray Silver

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily.)
 MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 21.—General R. E. Steiner today confirmed information from Washington that Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, had made satisfactory explanation of a statement accredited to him last March which said "General Steiner had offered the Federation 'a virtual bribe' in connection with Muscle Shoals."

This explanation has been accepted by General Steiner and no court proceedings will be filed. After the statement was made General Steiner announced that he intended to sue for libel. He placed the matter in the hands of William M. Williams, formerly of Montgomery and now an attorney of Washington. The result was that Mr. Silver wrote General Steiner a letter in which he disclaimed any intention of charging improper conduct against General Steiner.

 PRINCESS—TUESDAY

Wallace Reid, popular Paramount star, will be seen in a new automobile speed picture, "Across the Continent," at the Princess theater next Tuesday. In this picture the star returns to his old love—the automobile, and in the transcontinental tale by Byron Morgan, Mr. Reid has plenty of fine chances to demonstrate his prowess at the steering wheel. All kinds of thrills and unexpected twists and turns have been introduced and of course the love element is strongly presented. The company worked back and forth across the continent in securing the scenes, so that the picture presents a good percentage of exteriors and covers a considerable stretch of territory. Mr. Morgan has done a number of pictures for Mr. Reid, which have been among the most popular in which he has appeared, but "Across the Continent" is said to surpass them all in interest and pictorial quality. Mary MacLaren is leading woman.

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Examinations of papers and correspondence seized in a raid last night on the offices of the Trades Union Educational League, which is headed by William Z. Foster, who led the steel strike and who recently was deported from Colorado as one of the foremost radical leaders of America, bared widespread "One Big Union" propaganda among the railroad workers and gave valuable information concerning a systematic series of radical meetings in railroad centers, according to State's Attorney Crowe. No arrests were made.

Disorders Continue

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Disorders continued here in the rail strike in the early hours of the eighth week, despite the peace negotiations underway at the conference held in New York and assurances by the Big Four that no sympathetic strike would be ordered to bring complete paralysis of the transportation system of the United States.

On the Atlantic side new disorders were reported. Eleven workers were reported to have been attacked by strike sympathizers in Columbia, South Carolina.

KNOXVILLE MAN SHOT

(By International News Service.)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 21.—Police today were searching for a "mysteryman," who, late last night, shot and fatally wounded Harvey G. Nelson at the latter's home on East Main avenue. Nelson died without making a statement.

Charles Cash, the only known eyewitness to the shooting, said a stranger approached the Nelson house and began an argument.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Frightening Children

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

DR. WILLIAM PALMER LUCAS of the University of California says that Fear is often the greatest set-back a child has in his development. Dr. Lucas spoke at Seattle the other day to an organization of nurses, and the things he said to those nurses about women who frighten children in order to control them would have made the ears of some careless grown-ups turn a deep purple.

Hurrah for Dr. Lucas! If he never says another thing as long as he lives, he has said enough right now to make all who love children and understand them remember him as long as they live.

"The policeman will get you—if you say that."
 "The bogey-man will catch you."
 "The black dog will bite you."
 "The tall ghost will come after you."

What kind of a world is this for children to live in when people say such things as these to them?

Every coward and every fool who ever lived loves to frighten other people. If he can't frighten a man or a woman, he'll frighten a child, and if he can't do that, he'll try to scare a dog or a cat, or sneak up on a nervous, high-strung horse and make him jump and rear and tremble—if he can.

It makes the coward or the fool feel important and powerful—that's why he does it.

I'm afraid I should do my very best to do a little frightening myself. I'd rather employ a thief or a drunkard to take care of my child than to pay some one who would think it funny to scare a child into obedience by threatening him with a policeman, or a bogey-man or a black dog or a tall ghost, or anything else that might come in handy.

What a terrible thing it is to take the sensitive plate of a young child's mind and etch upon it some image of terror that will follow him and dwarf him and hamper him as long as he lives.

I know a grown man, a man of courage and character, who told me once that it took him years to train himself to pass a graveyard in the dark alone, because an ignorant nurse had told him ghost stories when he was little.

A Fine "Gift"

We didn't know what was the matter with the woman who was when she kept shivering in her delirium and screaming about the big dog. But when she was well again she told us that all the time she was ill, she dreamed that she was a little girl and that the black dog, who was hidden behind the lilac bush in their old garden at home was jumping out at her and trying to catch her. To this day that woman trembles from head to foot if the most harmless dog in the world comes anywhere near her.

Of course, there wasn't any black dog behind the lilac bush at all. An older cousin who was spending the summer with the family just told her that tale to have the "fun" of frightening her. Fine gift to leave behind her as a memento, wasn't it?

As for the mothers who scare their children to make them "be good" well, if I couldn't bring up a little, loving, sensitive child and make it good without scaring it, I would give up my job and be done with it there.

Here's to you, Dr. Lucas! More power to your voice and to the principles behind the voice.

Advance Stoves and Ranges

We are picturing here the four most popular styles, every one fully guaranteed, designed according to the high quality standards that have made the name "Advance" famous in American homes for the past half century.

The large range in the upper left bakes, cooks and broils with either gas or coal. Enamel panels on the doors, nickel trimmings add to its attractive appearance. Convenient terms may be arranged.

The range shown to the left in the upper panel is the new, all-enamel range that women everywhere are talking about. As easy to clean as a china plate, durable, lasting and available on easy terms.

There is no more popular range in our entire line than the Star "Advance" pictured in the upper right. It is a guaranteed baker, long lived and an extraordinary value at its special low price.

The range at the lower left is the finest value to be found anywhere at its price. It has enamel door panels, nickel trimmings and just a small cash payment delivers it to your home.

A Small Deposit Delivers Any Range

The balance will be arranged to suit your own individual requirements—no red tape, just a simple, old-fashioned charge account. Order your new range now!
